“Self-Renewal During Crisis”

Some call it Crisis; Some call it a Challenge; Others just call it Life.

This Workshop is designed to help each of us realize and develop skills for handling crises in healthy ways. Learn to find personal peace and create spiritual growth in the midst of crisis.

Thursday Evening Keynote Address

Open to Public at no charge!

“Five Crises that Heal”

Family Psychologist
Wes Crenshaw, PhD

Dr. Wes believes in the premise: Crises are inevitable; Healing is optional. From the time we're born, life poses one problem after another. Our job is to cope, survive and thrive. Dr. Wes will identify five human crises we all share, and how they can bring about positive change in our lives.

Friday Skill-building Sessions

SKILL-BUILDING SESSIONS - FRIDAY, AUGUST 22

Morning Sessions - May attend 2

Terri Rathbun, BS

Thriving in a New Physical Reality

A life-changing diagnosis can be a curse or a blessing, a disaster or a challenge, a tragedy or a new normal. Learn strategies, coping mechanisms, and ways to thrive when the body is targeted for a new reality.

Eldercare Housing By Calculation or Crisis

Planning and preparation can make a housing move in later years a healthy experience. Learn to assess housing needs from a practical and personal standpoint. Discover options and outcomes of long term care and facilities.

Denise Leichter, RN

Youth in Despair

Teens are more likely to die from suicide than cancer or heart disease. Teen suicides can be prevented; help is available. Learn common myths and risk factors, and ways to reduce risks based on scientific evidence.

Shayla Sullivant, MD

Crisis of Faith

Experiencing internal conflict or turmoil about one's beliefs or life decisions can create a crisis of faith. What are the sources and root causes of these internal conflicts and how do we overcome these times of intense doubt to find healing of the spirit?

Pam Cress, MA

Anticipatory Grief: Living with Prolonged Illness

Anticipatory grief is both the easiest and the hardest kind of grief to experience. It can be an emotional roller coaster. Learn ways to cope with the impending loss.

Deb Babbitt, LMSW

Impact of Trauma in Families

While some crises bring families together, others can destroy them. Divorce, for instance, can be a source of trauma or the start of healing. Learn what resources are available for safety, services, and recovery to help both children and adults cope.

Rita Witt, MA

Afternoon Sessions - May attend 2

Joy Weydert, MD

Healing Under Stress

When something goes wrong, do you bounce back or fall apart? Looking at physical, emotional, mental, and spiritual needs and changes under stress, we will explore strategies with conventional and alternative therapies to promote resilience.

Alice Brink, MS

Ecotherapy: Mental Health Through Nature

Ecotherapy, or Nature Therapy, is an adjunct to conventional therapy practiced outdoors and using the natural world. Explore the history of this approach to healing and learn the contemporary use of "Vitamin N".

Sue Westwind, AADP

Spiritual Practices to Nurture the Whole Person

The realities of life form a continuum line stretching from joy to crisis. With methods and practices we can bend this line of extremes into a circle creating balance and equilibrium.

Marvin Rice, MAR

Stillness in Motion

Be still and know... but how? In our busy, stress-inducing culture we lose connection with ourselves and each other. Learn why yoga is becoming so popular and is now often recommended. Experience a brief yoga session and enjoy your journey.

Diane Rogers, RYT

Fueling for Healing

The healing process is personal and not only a medical event. Some foods assist the healing process; others obstruct it. Fueling for healing requires a whole person healthy approach. Learn how to feed the body when the soul is in turmoil.

Rebecca Blackwell, BSN

Friday Afternoon PANEL DISCUSSION: Congregational Ministry for People in Crisis

Churches are often the first place people turn when they are in crisis. Various ministry approaches are needed for individuals and families in crisis as an important aspect of healthy congregations. A panel of ministers from different denominations will identify and share approaches to encourage whole person health within congregations. They will highlight various aspects of the day's discussions in terms of meeting physical, psychosocial, and spiritual needs.
