HIDDEN BLESSING IN HONDURAS

By Shannon Hattey RPh

Several years ago on my first health missions to Honduras I met a child who was an instrument of change in my life. It was a hot, sticky day in a mountain village with no electricity and poor lighting. There were two physicians seeing patients and writing prescriptions for lots of medications. By mid-afternoon I was exhausted, frazzled, and beat. From out of the crowd came a little girl with a can of ice-cold pineapple juice and a hug. She disappeared as quickly as she had appeared but her simple act of caring and kindness is why I continue to serve these gracious people.

July 2002 will be my fourth health mission to Honduras, I have made friends and deep relationships with brothers and sisters far away, some of which do not speak a language I understand. Learning Spanish, though, is a new goal in my life, I have welcomed these people into my home just as I have been welcomed into their home in Honduras. These relationships are a result of the missions.

Frequently, I am asked what a pharmacist does in Honduras. Much of the work is done in the states before we leave to procure medications, inventory products, and substitute as needed to have a working formulary. Once in Honduras, we perform the traditional dispensing role along with "other" jobs such as lice shampoo treatments, dressing changes, teaching, sharing, and playing with children. Clinical skills can be challenged by compounding pediatric doses and medication substitutions.

By the end of a week in Honduras I will have received more than I have given, I am indeed tired from a week of hard work but I have a deeper appreciation for these people and their culture. The missions and the people we serve continue to change my perspective on what is "really" important. I come home feeling grounded with a renewed faith and life values.

It is from these experiences that I am willing to be the team leader for the January and July health teams. Please consider sharing with us and with the Honduran people your time and skills on of the upcoming health missions.

Benediction offered by Brother Roy Schaefer at the Health Ministries Banquet April 6, 2002, at IRHC

Dear Creator, Healer and Friend;

What a joyous, sacred privilege to share this evening with You and these your servants of healing. May we often reflect that 172 years ago on this day, a small group of your people met and in response to Your call established this faith movement. This historic event was centered in your Son and became the soil out of which spouted the Community of Christ.

As we take a few moments to reflect on the ministries of Your Son we are awe struck by the amazing sacred record of ministries of healing that were shared with so many

We recount healing ministries in which you touched blind eyes, forgave sin, raised people from the dead, befriended the rebuked, shared living water, healed the crippled, and brought hope to the depressed.

What a fantastic time to be alive. A time in which we are privileged to participate with you in addressing desperately needed healing ministries. Everywhere people of all ages are in pain. The call to each one here this evening is the call to rededicate ourselves anew in these ministries with You

As disciples let us, each one, daily proclaim our serving as active partners with You in these vital ministries of wholeness.

Let us daily sense the refreshing breezes of joy You share, hope You bring, and love You multiply. May each one of these, Your children, rejoice in the assurance that the present and future are as bright and luminous as Your presence. For they radiate from You and light each and every soul. So we humbly proclaim our desire to continue becoming one with You, walking with You, serving with You, healing with You, and freeing all with You, now and forever. O Holy One. Amen,
